I've seen the configuration in higher end Monacos where all eight House batteries are in the big battery compartment and the two chassis batteries in aft compartment. My plan is to switch house to lithium rather than add four more flooded batteries, but my flooded house batteries are only 1.5 years old.

Looking for recommendations for new house batteries for my Monaco. Currently I have 3 Marathon 12V105FT batteries installed, but they're 6 yrs old and don't provide enough juice for 24hrs of boondocking any longer.

Cleanliness & Sorting: here you can find all recycling points in the Principality, including bins for waste, glass, electronic waste and batteries; Repair and second hand: here you can find repair outlets (for clothing, electronics, household appliances, bikes, jewellery, shoes) and donation points (textiles, toys, books) Articles

A discarded watch battery can contaminate one square metre of ground and 1,000 square metres of water for 50 years. This kind of waste is easy to recycle: current technology allows all of the materials which make up the battery or rechargeable battery to ...

I installed a Li-bim (Lithium battery isolator manager) in place of the old isolator system components. Basically what it does is allow charging of house Lithiums, chassis lead acid batteries and then gives the alternator a rest (Cooling) these generally operate on a timing system rotating among all 3 stages while you drive.

The better LiFePO batteries have overcharge protection, good protection, so if the inverter goes haywire and tries to zap the battery the BMS (battery management system) will shut down before damage occurs.

If you would check in the battery compartment for the chassis charger it will probaly be one of three brands, Trik-L-Start, Xantrex Echo charger or a Lambert. I have never cut off my coach batteries when at home in the shed but always keep it plugged to 30 or 50A service.
